Last Week's Run

text by Stumbling Dyke, pix from Snail Trail and Periodical

Scooby Doo and his accomplice, Periodical, took us down a leafy dirt track to a secluded A bucket for today's outing - being located between the football pitch and the Hug Café just off Canal Road. About 25 familiar faces turned out with Beer and Brothels making a long time return after a covid induced hiatus who on his travels had met one of those lesser spotted tourists and enticed or coerced , I'm not sure, her in coming to today's run.

We all set off into the forest following the usual up and down trails, strewn with copious amounts of small rocks ,which always result in fun and games whilst being traversed .The hares had, at great personal expense, decided to set the trail with environmentally friendly baby powder giving the forest an uncharacteristic sweet and fresh aroma. Arriving at the Wimp – Rambo split myself, Beer & Brothels and Stacy, the afore mentioned tourist, were met by Scooby who advised us as we were all so far behind the rest of the pack doing the Rambo trail would result in us not having enough time to finish in daylight. We reluctantly succumbed to his advice although we were all perfectly psyched up to do the long run.

As we meandered our way back to the A site, Beer & Brothels and I tried to explain to Stacy the veritable merits of hashing and what being a hasher was all about. I sensed an air of utter bewilderment, albeit in the most polite of manners, from her as we describe some of the hashing rigmarole. Her bewilderment was only compounded when she experienced the circle with all its rites, traditions and idiosyncrasies. Apparently at the OnOnOn she confided in Titty Smoker that the hash seemed like a cult to her, but she had thoroughly enjoyed herself which is what it's all about.

All that said, great run guys thanks very much.
